ArcMap, part of a suite of integrated applications in ArcInfo 8, is used to display and query maps, create publication-quality information, and develop custom mapping applications. This guide explains how to perform map-based tasks that range from putting geographic information on a map to building interactive displays that link charts, tables, reports, and photographs to data. Also discussed are ways to use ArcMap's editor to edit, create, and update data and techniques for developing custom map-based applications.
