Contemporary Options in Eschatology: A Study of the Millennium Millard J. Erickson

Examines contemporary, conservative opinions on eschatology, critiquing the various millennial positions and tribulational views. Closely and critically examines the theological and hermeneutical system of dispensationalism. Describes each position, its history, its major concepts, and the arguments offered in support of each, stimulating believers to search the Scriptures to determine which things are true. Includes a review of lesser known 19th and 20th century positions, including Schweitzer, Dodd, Bultmann, and Moltmann.
