The War Chest Porter Hill

The East India Company's Bombay Marines were the toughest and roughest bunch of soldier sailors on the Indian Ocean - and they did all the Company's dirty work. But the Bombay Marines saved the dirtiest and deadliest missions for one man - Captain Adam Horne. Madagascar 1761: When agents of the East India Company learned of a French ship bearing gold for troops on the island of Mauritius, the Company called Adam Horne to action. Since his successful mission in Madras, Horne had bided his time and mourned the destruction of his ship, Eclipse. Called to Madagascar for debriefing, the Company gave Horne a new frigate - and a mission that could cost all his fearless Bombay Marines their lives. They would lay in wait for the French vessel at the Cape of Good Hope - despite the odds against them - and take what the French were so desperate to keep....The War Chest.
